Kabalungi is a daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Nguna. She is in Primary six at Kushoma Junior School. Her father is a bursar at Njeru College, in Boga Sub-county.

Last year, on her tenth birthday, Kabalungi was invited by her grandfather. He wanted to make a feast for her; day Kabalungi then asked for permission from her mother who told her to wait for her father. When Mr.Nguna came back from work, he received the news. He was very happy that the small girl had love for his parents.

The next day on Thursday, Kabalungi rang to her grandfather. She told him that she had been given permission. She even told him her favorite food. Kabalungi also washed her clothes. She swept the house to keep it clean during the time she would be away.

That night she could not sleep. She kept on thinking of the visit and how old her grandparents were. When it struck seven in the morning, her mother gave her the fare and she took a taxi.

By ten, she had reached. Her grandfather was waiting at the roadside. When she got off the taxi, she saw him. He got the luggage and led her to the house. Grandmother was busy cooking. Kabalungi greeted them and that day she was very happy.

Lunch was now ready. Kabalungi enjoyed the smoked fish with sweet potatoes. There was also a glass full of juice. After the meal, the old man got out his radio and played music up to late in the evening. It was a wonderful day.

53. Read the poem below carefully and answer the questions that follow in full sentences.

Mosquitoes Mosquitoes
Why do you suck my blood day and night?
Then you spread malaria to me
I hate you so much.

Mosquitoes Mosquitoes
In tall bushes, you hide I know
Broken pots and stagnant water are your habitats
From there, you come to suck my blood against my will.

Mosquitoes Mosquitoes
Don't think that you are very wise
I have got your medicine
You will not disturb me again

Mosquitoes Mosquitoes
I will cut all the bushes around
Remove the broken pots and stagnant water
And then I sleep under a treated mosquito net
